

If the true decision boundary in real-world data is nonlinear, how much difference in classification error can typically be expected between LDA and QDA? What factors influence this error difference?